

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In a program table displayed on the screen of a television receiver, past programs (programs which already have been broadcast), programs currently being broadcast and future programs (programs which will be broadcast) are displayed with different colors so as to be distinguishable from one another. A selected program frame is displayed with still another color. When the selected program frame is a program currently being broadcast, the display is switched to the selected program, and when it is a future program, a process of programming the recording of the selected program is executed.

323949_1